Young Slovak designers say ↵

Servus

from

Bratislava

Vienna and Bratislava are the two closest capitals in the world, together with the Vatican and Rome and the capitals of the Democratic Republic of Congo and the Republic of Congo. From the windows of Bratislava one can watch planes landing at the Schwechat airport, but from a social and cultural perspective the distance may seem much bigger. The exhibition Servus from Bratislava in Walking-Chair Gallery brings to Vienna a rare overview of the young design scene in Bratislava.

The title, a mixture of 3 languages, reflects the communicational barrier between Slovak and German. Curiously English is being used in this region to understand each other, although both cultures share a volume of common words, including the greeting Servus!
